Following the play which caused much merriment, there were vocal solos by Herbert Carter, Harold Greene, Harold Bartlett and Miss Margaret Carter. A trombone solo by William Swann, of New Hampshire. Mrs. F. E. Russell and Miss Grace Carter presided at the piano. Refreshments of cake and coffee were served by the hostess.

BETHEL TRIMS WEST PARIS 7-1

The Hitless Wonders Get Hot.

(By I. E. D.) After losing the last few games that they have played by their inability to hit, the Bethel players broke loose Wednesday and finally won a ball game.

They gathered nine clean hits off the deliveries of R. Doughty and Benson including a double and a triple by Maynard and three nice singles by Bobby.

Hallock was back in the box again for Bethel and pitched a good game. He struck out nine men and allowed but four hits, two of these going to Penley.

Another fine feature of the game was the umpiring. This was handled in a first class manner by Rodney Bartlett. No crabbing on decisions were heard from either side.

BETHEL LOSES TO LOCKE MILLS

Maynard in Box for Bethel but is Wild

Bethel went to Lockes last Friday with high hopes of winning a game for a change but once more they had to be content with second base. The Locke Mills team were re-enforced with four or five West Paris players, and these combined with an umpire from Bryant Pond were too much for the locals.

3RD U. S. CAVALRY SQUADRON STARTS 400 MILE MARCH

To Camp Here Next Tuesday, Sept. 2

HOME OF J. A. McMillan DESTROYED BY FIRE

Early Tuesday morning fire of undetermined origin destroyed the home of Jack McMillan, locally known as the George Seavey place, on the Frost Hill road. The flames had gained such headway upon discovery that the family had barely time to escape. Nothing was saved from the house, a sum of money amounting to over $150, was also burned. A cow and pig were rescued from the barn. The loss is estimated at over $2,000 with a small insurance. The family is stopping with neighbors at present.

MAINE ORCHARDISTS ON FOUR DAY TOUR

Thirty members of the Maine Pomological Society representing an industry which last year grew for the European, New York and Boston market 692,000 barrels of choice apples valued at $1,834,000, will begin a four day tour of inspection of New England's vast apple country, Wednesday, August 27.

Starting from Auburn at 7:30 A. M. Standard Time, under the leadership of E. P. Washburn, Commissioner of Agriculture, A. K. Gardner, President of the Society and Crop Specialist, University of Maine, and F. O. Sturtevant of the Market Division of the Department of Agriculture and Vice President of the Pomologists, the party will follow a 700 mile route which takes them through northern and southern New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts and Vermont. They will make a study of orchards in these sections with a view to adapting the best methods to the culture of Maine's 2,441,000 apple bearing trees and 435,000 young trees.

They will lunch the first day at Walter B. Farmer's Applecrest Farm in Hampton Falls, N. H. where they will make an inspection of the methods that have made Mr. Farmer one of the leading pomologists in the East with an annual crop that in roadside sales alone amounts to over $10,000.

Mr. Farmer's packing house and storage plant is one of the show places of the New England apple country with unique sorting, cleaning and packing equipment. His farm is famous for the size and quality of its McIntosh, Wealthy, Wagner and Baldwin apples.

From Hampton Falls, the Pomologists will proceed to Ayer, where they will visit the Nashoba Packing Plant, and at Groton will inspect Stephen Sabine's 15,000 trees. The night will be spent in Fitchburg. Thursday they will visit the large orchards of Putnam, Bellows Falls, Dorset and Fairhaven, Vermont. Friday Montpelier, and North Woodstock will be visited. The party will return home Saturday by way of the Franconia Notch.

Those making the tour are: E. P. Washburn, Commissioner of Agriculture; F. O. Sturtevant, Market Division, Department of Agriculture; A. K. Gardner, President Pomological Society, also Crop Specialist, University of Maine; Robert F. Chandler, Jr., Augusta; Chas. L. Eastman, Auburn; Donald H. Ridley, South Paris; R. C. Wentworth, Rockland; W. S. Rowe, Portland; Harold C. Woolly, Wiscasset; W. J. Rieker, Turner; L. C. Berry, Livermore Falls; Guy A. Brackett, Limington; Guy Colby, Limington; A. W. Stirling, Kittery; Ralph E. Campbell, Greene; E. W. Dolloff, Standish; Arthur M. Hersey, North Berwick; Daniel B. Lord, Kezar Falls; T. H. Heald, South Paris; H. C. Philbrick, Greene; C. W. Bishop, West Sumner; Carl O. Anderson, Cape Elizabeth; W. G. Roberts, Alfred; C. M. Conant, Winterport; Archie Leavitt, Turner; Cecil J. Siddall, Sanford; B. H. Lovejoy, Sanford; Geo. Blanchard, Cumberland Center; D. C. Wilson, Sabbath-day Lake; and Myron O. Lord, Limerick.

Mrs. Guy Perkins is working in Stowell's Mill.

Josephine Thurston has returned home from Winsor, N. H.

Delmont Swift spent the week end with his parents at Mechanic Falls.

Miss Fay Mitchell was a week end guest of friends at Mechanic Falls, Sunday.

Mrs. Guy Morgan has returned from a weeks visit with relatives and friends in Bangor and Lewiston.

Mrs. Fred A. Mundt will leave for Portland this afternoon. From Portland she will go to N. Y., embarking with other gold star mothers on the S. S. Republic, Sunday, for a trip to France. She will return the first week in October.

Sunday callers at Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Demeritt's were: Mr. and Mrs. C. Demeritt and daughter, Daphne, Waterford; Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Barker and two children, Robert and Dorothy, Jay; and Mr. and Mrs. James Gupill, Rumford.

FARM BUREAU—GRANGE FIELD DAY LAST WEEK

Annual Event Held at County Fair Grounds Wednesday

The annual Oxford County Farmers' Field Day was held Wednesday August 20 and drew an attendance of 300 in spite of the drizzling rains. Paris Grange No. 44 opened its doors to keep folks dry and comfortable and here the full program with the exception of the baseball game, was enjoyed. People from the farthest corners of the county were present notwithstanding the weather. Upton, seated in the wilds of Umbagog Lake, was present with a beautiful truck float representing the Farm Bureau and Grange, as was the town of Hiram, in the extreme western end of the county. An eight piece orchestra-band successfully drove away any gloom that may have been present.

In the forenoon everyone got settled down to hear a good talk on Home Flower Gardens by S. H. Strand, New Gloucester, and a good demonstration on colors for bedrooms by the State 4-H Club demonstration team from Bryant Pond which will go to Springfield Exposition this fall. Free soil testing was done during the day. At noon, interest centered around four tramped hens, the object of a guessing contest on egg production. Prizes were awarded to Arthur Stearns, Hanover 1st prize; Arthur Holman, Hanover 2nd prize; and George Stearns, Ridley, 3rd prize by County Agent.

Following a picnic dinner in the large dining hall, C. M. White, Chief of the Division of Markets, Augusta, spoke on export laws pertaining to vegetables and apples. Then came an address by Rev. C. W. Helsey of the High Street Congregational Church, Auburn. The speaking program over folks gathered outside and were given a demonstration on poultry killing by Alfred Dyer, owner of the Red Bird Poultry Farm, Norway.

Last but not least came the elaborate float parade in which eighteen community organizations were represented. The parade, travelling through the towns of South Paris and Norway, showed much preparation and spoke well for the Farm Bureau, Grange, and 4-H Club organizations which they represented. Prizes for the best floats were awarded the Snappy Six 4-H Club of South Paris, Paris Grange No. 44 and Franklin Grange of Bryant Pond in the order named.

In the parade were floats from Bryant Grange, Paris Grange, Oxford Pomona, Norway Grange, Oxford Grange, Bethel Grange, Oxford Bear No. 62 and Upton Grange No. 404, South Paris Farm Bureau Men and South Paris Farm Bureau Ladies, North Rumford Farm Bureau and Hiram Farm Bureau, Upton Farm Bureau, South Paris Snappy Six 4-H Club, Progressive Farmers 4-H Club of South Paris and Hilltop Seven 4-H Club of Paris Hill.

Many other floats were prepared and would have been present but for the rain.

Miss Alta Smith returned to Auburn, Saturday after a weeks visit with Mrs. Lealie Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clark and children returned to Massachusetts, Wednesday, after a short vacation spent with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clark.

Leslie Davis and Charles Swan went to Portland, Monday, where Mr. Swan entered the Eye and Ear Infirmary for surgery. Favorable reports are received from Mr. Swan.

Mrs. Phillip F. Brown was hostess to a dancing party at Bethel Grange Hall last Friday evening. Dainty refreshments were served by the Misses Elizabeth Bean and Roma Warren.

Mrs. Angie Bean of North Andover, Mass., who has been spending the summer at her old home at Albany, Me., is visiting her son Herbert and family for a few days before going to her sister's at Lewiston.

Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Bean started on a motor trip Wednesday, stopping at Skowhegan, Bangor, and Buxton en route to West Garland. Mrs. Bean's girlhood home, for the reunion or Old Home Day on Saturday, August 30.

Mrs. George N. Thompson who is very ill at her home on Church Street in slightly improved. Dr. McCarty was called in consultation with Dr. Tibbette, Tuesday. Miss Annette Marsh, R. N., of New York, is caring for Mrs. Thompson.

The Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. Dazell at the Parsonage last Thursday.

Mrs. Millie Clark presented the following program on good fiction. Book review—A Lantern in Her Hand, Mrs. Fred Clark. Book review—One Increasing Purpose, Mrs. Dazell. Extracts from Let Us Highly Rejoice, Mrs. Asa Bartlett. Book review—The Splendor of God, Mrs. Bertha Wheeler.

CAPPER MEDALS TO THE BEST GIRL CANNERS IN COUNTY

Special awards by Senator Arthur Capper, of silver and bronze medals to the two 4-H Club girls who enter Oxford County's best jars of home canned fruits, vegetables and meats in the National Canning Contest at Shenandoah, Iowa, is announced in a message to the Citizen from Shenandoah, Iowa, where the contest is being held under the auspices of the Household Science Institute.

Senator Capper, long a friend of the 4-H clubs and a member of the National Committee on Boys' and Girls' Club Work, in making the awards said that he hoped these awards would serve to encourage home canning work among farm girls and that they would prove of value to 4-H club leaders and extension workers in furthering this work.

The Capper medals are in addition to the list of 470 prizes totaling $4,250 in cash, loving cups and ribbons which will be distributed to the winners in the contest. The grand sweepstakes award of the contest carries with it a cash prize of six hundred dollars.

The contest is open to every woman and girl. There are no restrictions as to the nature of the food sent. Contestants may enter the fruit, vegetable or meat division, any two divisions, or all three. Entries should be sent immediately upon canning. These will be kept on exhibition at Shenandoah till the closing of the contest on October 1.

The list of contest judges includes five of America's outstanding home economics experts and nutrition authorities, headed by Dr. Louise Stanley, Chief of the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. That the judging may be thoroughly impartial and the display of jars absolutely uniform, contestants are required to send their entries in standard glass jars of the quart size. A sample Ball mason jar and carton, together with prize entry labels and full information for entering may be had without cost by writing the National Canning Contest, Shenandoah, Iowa.

Any preferred method of canning may be used although it has been found that the hot pack method together with the use of a pressure cooker for the sterilizing is best, especially for non-acid vegetables, states Orace Viall Gray, nationally known canning expert who is secretary of the contest. This method of canning is recommended by the U. S. Department of Agriculture because it saves time and fuel and assures sterility, while preserving the natural flavor, color, and texture of the canned article.

SAVE-A-LIFE CAMPAIGN

Reports covering the "Save-A-Life" campaign which is now in progress and which draws to a close on August 31st has now been compiled on 56,327 cars. This figure does not include the reports which have been received and which have not as yet been tabulated. It is estimated that fully 100,000 cars have been inspected during the first three weeks of the campaign.

"The defects found in the number of cars tabulated to date are indeed amazing," stated Governor Wm. Tudor Gardner, "and it is hoped that in the end of the campaign every Maine motor vehicle will be displaying an official sticker. The inspection is free and 350 inspection stations are located throughout the state. It is hoped that Maine will lead the other New England states in this most worthy campaign of endeavoring to save human lives."

1,519 Reports Recorded.

56,327 Cars Inspected.

19,906 Brakes Adjusted.

3,101 Brakes Replaced.

33,665 Lights Adjusted.

2,087 Lights Replaced.

6,437 Horns Adjusted.

866 Horns Replaced.

3,214 Steering Adjusted.

904 Steering Parts Repaired.

1,821 Mirrors Adjusted.

1,107 Mirrors Replaced.

1,650 Windshield Wipers Adjusted.

777 Windshield Wipers Installed.

914 License Tags Corrected.

Governor Gardner has been more than gratified by the big response given by the motoring public of the State of Maine to the "Save-A-Life" Campaign and he says that no doubt many cars that were a menace to the highways have been put in a safe condition and the motorists of Maine will be driving their cars in a more safe and comfortable manner than before the campaign.

There is a great improvement already noticed in night driving. Many of the glaring headlights have been adjusted so as not to throw the glare into motorists' eyes.

Miss Mary McCormack of New York is working for W. B. Baker.

MUSIC FESTIVAL AND A NEW COMEDY AT LAKEWOOD

The three programs arranged by Dr. William Rogers Chapman for the Lakewood Music Festival provided such an array of fine music as never before had been heard in Maine. There were ten of the favorite operas represented in the varied programs and magnificent playing by that master of the violin Benno Rabinooff. Too much credit cannot be given Messrs. Cummings and Syrett of Lakewood and Dr. Chapman for having made it possible to hear such fine music on this occasion.

A NEW COMEDY

Beginning Wednesday night and continuing for the balance of the week, with a matinee on Saturday, the Lakewood Players will present Donald Meek in a new comedy "Western Union, Please" with Jean Adair. This comedy is the work of two Lakewood favorites Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett. They are fortunate in having Mr. Meek and Miss Adair create the important roles in the play.

When "Western Union, Please" is on view at Lakewood there will be a number of New York Theatrical managers present with the view of taking the play for production. Interest in it has been heightened by the success in New York of the comedy "Everybody Welcome" by the same authors. Donald Meek is the foremost comedian of his type on the stage today and he is, alone, sure to make it worth while paying a visit to "Western Union, Please" at Lakewood this week.

LABOR DAY WEEK

For Labor Day Week the Lakewood Players will present the New York success "Everybody's Jake" by the popular columnist, Don Marquis. As usual there will be a matinee on Labor Day, Monday, September 1st. There will be unusual interest in the production of this comedy for Thurston Hall is to appear in the role of "Jake" the bootlegger, which he created when the play was presented in New York last season.

Look for the Banner on the pump

What motorists tell US about the New Socony—BANNER GASOLINE

Quick starting. "I've tried other popular-price gasolines, but none respond so quickly to the starter as your new Banner."

Instant pick-up. "You claim that Banner gives instant pick-up. I say you're right. No other gasoline in its price class that I've tried can touch it."

More power. "You feel the extra power in Banner at once. There's an enormous power difference in favor of Banner over other popular-price gasolines."

More miles per gallon. "I'm going to get the most for my money out of the gallons I buy, and I'm getting that with Banner. It's got every other gasoline in its price class beat on mileage."

No knocking. "My car knocked on non-premium gasolines until I tried Banner."

No sticky valves. If there had been, we certainly should have heard about it—and there's not a single letter. Not surprising, since we know Banner is completely gum-free.

We know that all these things that people tell us are facts, for we have proved them by actual road tests made in Portland, Lewiston, Augusta and Bangor, August 7th, 8th, 9th and 11th.

NO MORE BLINDMAN'S BUFF!

Now

there's a Banner around the best popular-price pumps in Bethel

It wasn't enough for the Standard Oil Company of New York to offer motorists the best premium gasoline—Socony Special plus Ethyl. Motorists wanted the best popular-price gasoline, too—and now they have it—in the New Socony—Banner Gasoline.

On sale only three weeks. Already motorists are telling US of its quicker starting and pick-up, extra power, greater mileage, absence of knocking and entire freedom from gum.

We didn't ask people to believe these things on our say-so, but to try out the gasoline for themselves. They have—thousands of them—and they are keeping on using it. Every single day more motorists drive up to the Banner pumps—the busiest pumps in town.

Another car failed to complete the turn at Herman Mason's corner last Saturday night and went the way of a hundred others before it into the ditch. As usual there were no fatal results, so this is not offered as a news item. The fact remains, however, that hardly a week passes without some stranger finding himself in this predicament, and sooner or later there will be a serious accident at this point. Some years ago a reflecting warning signal was installed at this corner but this does not seem to be effective; apparently it is pointed so that it does not reflect the light as it did. If this is the case it can be remedied easily. A new signal indicating a right angle turn would be a help to the careful driver and possibly a fence would be some protection for those who are not so careful.

MAINE SPORTSMEN FISH AND GAME ASSOCIATION

The annual outing of the Maine Sportsmen's Fish and Game Association will be held this year at Lakewood, near Shawhegan on September 1st and 2nd.

Lakewood, famous all over Maine, and beyond, offers an ideal location for the outing. It is centrally located and within easy driving distance of all sections of the state. There are excellent arrangements for life, revolver and trap shooting, a splendid shore front and water sports and bathing, golf and tennis for those not taking active part in the Association program and Lakewood's unique theatre offers an evening's entertainment that cannot be equaled in the state.

For the sportsmen who would rather shoot than eat but must consider the desires of all the rest of the family over the holiday here is a golden opportunity. No matter what their tastes they will enjoy an outing at Lakewood and the gun crack can punch holes in a target or polio play leaders to his heart's content.

A varied and interesting program of shooting has been arranged for rifle, revolver and shot gun and all who are more willing to die in the end target shot. The winner of the mystery match will be a mystery till it is all over, and for those that are quick on the trigger and like for on their target the rising bear will give them a chance to bring home the bacon or the team meat.

Both residents and out of states will be welcome and those who are not present members will have an opportunity to join on the grounds as they may compete for the prize.

A number of shooters have already signified their intentions of entering and it is expected that this will be the largest outing held by the Maine Sportsmen in the last ten years.

In the few sections, then follows good recreation and south to U. S. 1, then to Bethel, conditions excellent.

Route 24—Construction between Bethel and Waterville, traffic maintained with the usual delays, conditions fair.

Route 101—Stratford to Center, Stratford under construction, conditions poor, detour provided and advised.

Route 102—Work in progress between Stratford and Waterville, fair to good detour posted and recommended.

Route 111—Stratfordville to West, north under construction for about two miles, conditions very poor, through traffic advised to use other state routes.

NEWRY

Sunday they took Mr. and Mrs. Powers and Rexford Powers to East Wilton by the way of Rumford, Dixfield, Canton, Jay, Livermore Falls, Peru and Turner, returning that night, making a very pleasant trip as the day was fine and the roads in excellent condition.

Walter Lord of North Waterford is running a meat cart through town every Monday.

Mr. Morton of North Newry is at work on the road at the lower end with road machine and truck.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving French were up to the farm last Monday night. Mr. French has sold his horses.

UPTON

The Parish boys and girls have gone to "Camp Gordon" for this week. Those going from Upton were Fred and Albert Jenkins, Marjorie and Methyl Wilbur, Muriel, Sylvia, and Gordon Barnett, and Avery and Ernest Angevine. Miss Lynda Barnett of Upton, Mrs. Nora Pedler who has been teaching the church vacation school in Weld, Me., Rev. H. A. Markley of Gorham, N. H., Rev. Norman S. Davis of Upton, Mr. Clifford Lewis of Newry, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hal dane of Bethel, N. H., and Miss Carrie Wright of North Newry have gone to Camp Gordon as leaders and instructors. Mr. George L. Atwood of Berlin, N. H., is also remaining at the camp as swimming instructor. A few other instructors and entertainers are expected to spend a portion of the week at camp among whom is Rev. W. I. Holt of North Waterford.

A union service of the Parish was held at the Upton Church, Sunday, August 24, with Mr. Borisoff of Bangor as speaker.

HAVE TEETH EXAMINED BEFORE SCHOOL OPENS

"Maine school children average five decayed teeth per mouth, by actual examination. That means that when the schools open, which time is very soon, more than 25,000 badly decayed teeth will prevent their owners from doing their best work in reading, writing and arithmetic," says the Maine State Department of Health, Division of Dental Hygiene.

"Children with healthy mouths can do better school work than those with unbrushed and decayed teeth. The child who is suffering with a toothache and who is dragged down by the infection from decayed teeth can not apply his mind and only wait to keep up with the grade."

"The four rules to keep a healthy mouth are these:

1. Eat a balanced diet containing plenty of fresh vegetables and uncooked fruits, milk and coarse breads.
2. Chew all food thoroughly.
3. Brush the mouth and teeth vigorously at least twice a day.
4. Visit your family dentist at least twice yearly to have your teeth cleaned and repaired.

"Too often parents wait until their child complains of a toothache before taking him to their dentist. Preventive measures—the above rules—practiced regularly will save a great deal of time, trouble and expense."

"If all parents would attend to their children's teeth before school begins, there would be fewer 'repeaters', fewer absences and better report cards."

Forward—Consolidation of Wayne, Bethel, Waterville and Portland Country Day School is favored by recent purchase by Waynflete of 40-acre Andrew Haines Estate at Broadwater.

HISTORY OF THE 3RD CAVALRY

The first clash of the Mexican War occurred on April 19, 1846 near Matamoros, Mexico. One month later to the day, Congress enacted the law which called into being the Regiment of Mounted Riflemen, known since 1861 as the 3rd Cavalry. Within ten months the regiment was fighting on foreign soil, as a part of General Scott's expedition which captured Vera Cruz and later advanced and captured the City of Mexico after many brilliant victories. This regiment born and bred in war has borne its share in every war since and has done more than its share in some. The first regiment to plant the Stars and Stripes over the National Palace in the City of Mexico in 1847, it was also the first to plant its standards on the top of San Juan Hill near Santiago, Cuba in 1898.

After the close of the Mexican War the regiment spent many years in frontier work including long and grueling marches and bloody encounters with the Indians.

It began a 2500 mile march to Oregon on May 10, 1849, through a country without roads and often without wood, water or grass, and compared to which some of our modern marches sink into insignificance.

The regiment returned to the coast two years later via Panama, Havana and New Orleans and until the opening of the Civil War it engaged the Indians forty six times in Utah, Texas and New Mexico.

It was kept in the west principally in New Mexico, during the first two years of the Civil War holding the Indians and border ruffians in check but in 1863 a part of the regiment took part in some fighting in Alabama. Again it was returned to the region west of the Mississippi, and in 1868 it went out into New Mexico and fought with the Indians. From 1872 to 1875 it was campaigning against the Indians in Nebraska.

Then came the year 1876 which saw some of the fiercest Indian fighting that ever occurred. The Sioux, the Cheyennes and other Indians went on the war path in the vast region south of the Yellowstone River in Montana and Wyoming. An expedition under General Terry was organized to advance upon them from the north. The 7th Cavalry that later on June 25, 1876 met disaster on the Little Big Horn was a part of the force. Another expedition, cavalry and infantry, under General Crook was organized to advance from the south. Ten troops of the 3rd Cavalry including Troops "A," "B" and "C" were a part of this force.

The first meeting of General Crook's force with the Indians took place on the Tongue River, Wyoming and resulted in an easy victory for the troops. But a week later on June 17 on the Rosebud River General Crook met a powerful force of Indians. For hours the battle raged back and forth over the tallies and ridges with indecisive results. In the end the troops remained in possession of the field, but their losses had been heavy, their supplies were low or exhausted, and they could go no farther. The next morning encountered with their wounded but unmolested by the Indians they marched back to the base of supplies. Thus ended one of the sharpest fights of that year of fights. One week later these same Indians reformed sitting Bull's hands on the Little Big Horn were largely instrumental in wiping out five troops of the 7th Cavalry.

In August, Terry and Crook marched toward each other and united forces, soon to part, Crook following a wide Indian trail east toward the Black Hills of Dakota. This march resulted in great privations, almost beyond description. On September 3, a Squadron of the 3rd Cavalry greatly distinguished itself in a surprise of American Horse's camp at Slim Butte, Dakota. The regiment remained in the west many years and engaged the Indians frequently but in 1904 it was ordered to the east and established Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont.

The new war that with again in 1909, again saw the 3rd Cavalry on hance its reputation in fighting around Santiago de Cuba where as said above it repeated its Mexican exploit and was the first to plant its standards on San Juan Hill.

Hardly had the regiment returned to the United States when it was ordered across the Pacific Ocean to participate in the fighting in the Philippine Islands and between 1899 and 1901 it fought 62 minor engagements with the Philippines.

In 1902 the regiment returned to the United States and took station at Fort Yellowstone, Wyoming and Fort Assiniboine, Montana. It served in the Philippines once more from 1906 to 1908 and upon its return went to Texas.

In the fall of 1917 the regiment went to France and rendered valuable services to the government in its excellent conduct of remount stations. One Troop got into action and went to Germany in the Army of Occupation. In 1919 the regiment returned to the United States and took station at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont where it remains in readiness for its next call to active duty.

W. N. U. SERVICE

CHAPTER I

Bond street, deserted by shopping and sightseeing crowds, is not so uninteresting. It is in fact rather depressing, to one who takes it between seven and eight o'clock on a typically hot and drizzling London night.

Save for an occasional belated clerk, watchman or two and a policeman, the young man who was making his way from Regent to Clifford street found it practically his own and he did not like it.

He turned the corner of Clifford street, caught sight of his own image in the long mirror of a corner shop which reflected the light from a street lamp, saw how disgruntled he looked and managed to smile at himself.

After all a disagreeable duty might as well be gone through with some spirit. He stopped to look in a bookshop window next to the entrance of the flats in which his stepmother had her temporary residence. He could see very little of the books, because of the dim light, but one large pile of new and shiny bound novels, well in the foreground with the price "seven-and-six" plainly marked, caught his eye. He stared at them with interest, because seven-and-six (less than two dollars) represented the exact amount he had in his pocket.

He was so hungry that he could not help hoping that his stepmother would not ask him to dine, since he could not possibly accept if she did, and the mere mention of food would make him ravenous. His pride rebelled that he refuse.

He had tasted nothing since breakfast. The journey to town had taken but his precious seven-and-six, and he had yet to secure a night's lodging. He found himself in the doorway, staring, his hand on the bell. The neighborhood was not fashionable, but was undoubtedly, for a country woman like his stepmother, both convenient and accessible. A few doors over him was the shop of a well-known shoemaker. He could see the sign from the doorstep. How many times he had come up this street to order a pair of shoes! Well, those free days were over. In fact they had come to an end when his father married the woman whose doorbell he was about to ring.

He gave the bell a savage pull and waited. There was no answer. He rang again.

Far and far away he heard the rattle of something that must be a motor. He shook the water from his hat and sighed.

The door was opened by a very pretty young girl in a maid's cap and apron.

"Lady Sanderson," she said.

Yes, sir.

The maid indicated the elevator, which was in the middle of the narrow brightly lit hall. The door was covered with a black and white patterned curtain. A dark marble-topped stand stood near the doorway, containing a mirror in which it was possible to see oneself. Surrounding the mirror were several wooden pegs which to hang hats and coats and a small, tarnished, silver-plated tray for cards on the marble top of the stand, and about it were scattered several letters and papers. It was the piece of furniture in the hall.

The maid paused to gather up the letters and papers before she followed the young man past the stairs, which were rather ornate as to handrail, balusters and newel post.

The young man and glanced quickly at the scattered letters before taking his way down the hall, reassured that one of them were in his handwriting. He received the note he had sent to his stepmother.

The elevator was so small that when the maid entered, and took hold of the rope which operated it, there was barely room for one passenger. The maid pushed the door and the antiquated contrivance began its slow ascent.

After his long sojourn in the Americas, both South and Central, the maid had given him an odd feeling like that experienced in a dream when the dreamer feels he has had done. The next moment, even as the dreamer, he had forgotten all that had been daily sight and experience for some time, and was once more part of the "British" environment in which he found himself, all consciousness gone.

His stepmother's flat was the front one on the second floor. The maid pushed the elevator to a standard height and preceded him down a narrow hallway. The young man followed, trying to picture what this meeting would be like.

The maid, after a perfunctory knock, pushed open the door and announced: "A gentleman to see you, Lady Sanderson."

"Come in," said a full deep voice with a good honest Scotch burr in it, and the young man walked in.

The sitting room looked very cozy, after the wet streets. The curtains were drawn and the fire was blazing. In one of the easy chairs, a large one, drawn close to the fire, her feet on the fender, sat a dumpy little woman with red-fair hair that was slowly turning gray. Her features were quite regular. Her complexion was clear red and white. She wore a black dress with white collar and cuffs, well and simply made, which gave her an air of greater refinement than was really hers. She could not, however, cloak her Scots' tongue. It is difficult to do. Lady Sanderson's speech justice in cold print. There was a crispness, a richness, a rolling of the r's, a tendency to make "tanner," "deener" that an attempt to illustrate by letters would only travesty.

The young man advanced toward his stepmother, who had not risen, with outstretched hand.

"Sir George," the dumpy little woman said, rising slowly to her feet and holding his hand, "it's grand to see you again."

As Sir George stood looking down at her, a slow smile lifted the corner of her lips. "Dear, dear! But you're an awful height laddie—I mean Sir George."

"Dear, Dear! But You're an Awful Height, Laddie."

"Oh, why not the 'laddie' if you like?"

His stepmother gave a quick look about her. The maid, all eyes, had left the room.

"Sit down, Sir George," she said with an air of command that somehow seemed natural to her. "I have your engagements or will you dine with me? I've a deal to say."

"I'll dine with you, gladly," Sir George found himself saying. He was amazed at himself, or was it at Lady Sanderson? It was the last thing he had contemplated, but since there was no way out now, he would continue at least to look as though duty and pleasure went hand in hand.

"Would an early dinner discommode you?"

"It would not. I would be glad to have it early. I've been traveling since morning."

"That'll suit me fine. I'll ring for the dinner now, and then we'll get to our talking."

She rang the bell and looked again at her stepson.

"Dear Sakes! It's queer enough to think of you and me sitting down together."

Sir George frowned, but before he could voice his evident annoyance, the woman spoke again.

"I've been wanting to tell you several things for a long while past. But they were not such things as could be put on paper, so I had to blurt in patience until I could get at you, so to speak."

The maid appeared again, and was briefly told to see about the dinner at once. "Sir George is dining with me."

The maid gave a pleased stare at Lady Sanderson, with her "Yes m'Lady," which led Sir George to surmise correctly that she had been taken, at least a short distance, into Lady Sanderson's confidence.

But Aggy, Lady Sanderson, never took anyone too far into her confidence. She had confided to the landlady through the maid, that the young man was expected. She had also hinted that she might "have him to dinner" if he was not that engaged that he hadn't a minute to spare, even for a stepmother. She had further added: "And I have that much to talk about with him that, in case we have not got through by midnight, I'll be asking you to leave sheets and blankets in the press here, so I can make up the couch in the sitting room for myself, if I can persuade the poor tired laddie to rest here."

The landlady, who had found Lady Sanderson "new" but just, had agreed to this, picturing to herself from Lady Sanderson's somewhat pale, tired and of fifteen or sixteen.

The sheets, blankets and pillow cases were that moment deposited on the top shelf of the press in the sitting room and the shrewd Lady Sanderson was determined they should be used, though this Sir George did not guess. He was, even then, his dinner having been provided by Providence, wondering where he would lay his head, yet retain his seven-and-six for breakfast in the morning, until he could borrow money enough to start anew.

Again Lady Sanderson upset her stepson's calculations, for she faced him and said:

"You must have often wondered what made me marry your father."

His father's son blushed, as he remembered that father, and then said guiltily:

"I never wonder at marriages. The reasons why are never clear to an outsider."

"I wouldn't exactly call you an outsider."

"Everybody except the parties to a marriage is an outsider," Sir George insisted. He was becoming a little annoyed with Aggy. He was remembering now that as his nurse, long years ago, she had seen awfully set on having her way, and would argue with the small boy he had been until she got it.

"My father was old enough—" he began again.

"Your father was an old fool. We both knew that," admitted Aggy with the awful directness that had always distinguished her, and using more markedly plebeian terms of expression than before. Evidently when Aggy grew excited or emotional, caution left her. "But what you do not understand is that he would have made a far worse fool of himself if I hadn't interfered. He was fair determined to marry that young brazen hussy, Joek Heath's daughter, Meggy. If I wouldn't have him, it was my thought that there would be less trouble and expense for you if he married me, a sensible woman of sense and middle age, than a young hussy that would make the money fly—and what was left of the estate."

"Aggy!" gasped her stepson.

"That's more like it," Lady Sanderson said, with a satisfied look. "Keep to Aggy, Sir George, and you'll not go far wrong. It's your own old Aggy, with an eye to your future, that married your father and, if I do say it, kept him in order for the last of his days."

Aggy grew solemn. "They were fewer than I thought they would be when I took on the job. He was a grand man, Sir Steele was, and I was set up that he should choose me. He was so hot the day we were married. I saw to that myself," she continued. "With an air of conscious rectitude, 'thy conscience!' It was an awful-like honeymoon! He started in when he reached Glasgow, and he was still at it, when, after running over the city half the night, I got him back to his hotel and then on the train for Sanderson. Save us! What he set there!" She shook her head. "Well, I kept him alive for more than a year and the doctor himself said it was a wonder that he had lasted a week. His end was very peaceful after he got over the idea he had that he was being chased by Robert Bruce's spidee—and all its family." She looked at Sir George with a kind of triumph in her eye.

"He was an extraordinary man, grand even in the D. T.'s. He couldn't even have a delirium like anybody else."

She stopped and wiped her eyes. "I was fond of him," she said simply. "In spite of all. I was a proud woman that he selected me to be his second, and however you have felt toward him and me, Sir George, you must mind I did it for your best interests, and he was an extraordinary man."

"I think," Sir George told her, "it is you who are an extraordinary woman," he hesitated and then said it, "Lady Sanderson."

"Oh, not that from you, Sir George," she cried, and then stretched out a timid, pudgy, capable hand toward him. "Could we not be friends, we two? There's a heap I would like to speak to you about, and indeed there's nothing I wouldn't do for you. You were my own wee laddie when I took care of you."

Sir George looked at her with an embarrassed air. "You make it hard for me, Lady."

"Aggy to you," declared Lady Sanderson promptly. "You called me that when I was your nurse girl, and I'm still wanting to look after you."

"Aggy," he began, after a moment's hesitation.

The maid came in with the cloth and began to set the table, and Sir George watched somberly. What was it in life that taught one and drew one toward the very people one hoped to avoid? He had come, only because of the duty he owed his father's widow, to see her once and be done with her forever—and he found he had forgotten how much he liked Aggy. It was preposterous, but it was true. This was the woman he had cursed many a day, many a night, and was dining with her!

Lady Sanderson, hesitated a moment when the maid left the room, and then went resolutely to where she had caused the extra blankets and sheets to be stored, and came back with a bottle of wine.

He stopped her as she was about to pour out a glass for him.

"No, Aggy, none for me, I'm too hungry, and the old man's horrible example is still before my mind's eye. I've been leaving that stuff alone."

"The Lord be praised!" said Aggy, and poured herself a generous glass. "There's no need of wasting His mercies, however. I can take it or leave it, and it has no effect. But to see you so discriminating is like an answer to prayer."

Sir George smiled and began his soup, he hoped not too ravenously. He had not dared take wine on so empty a stomach.

"This good sense you are showing will fit in well with a plan I have," continued Aggy as she took her soup spoon in hand. "How are you off?"

"Do you mean as to money?"

Lady Sanderson nodded. "I do so."

"I'm broke," Sir George told her, without emotion. "The Yucatan oil scheme was a failure. I came out alive and without debt, but that's all. I have," he hesitated, then laughed, and continued, "I have exactly seven-and-six between me and the cold world."

"Mighty!" exclaimed Lady Sanderson. The maid brought in the fish and served it, during a profound silence.

When she had taken her way to the elevator with the soup plates, Lady Sanderson spoke:

"The estate is in an awful bad way."

"Sir George nodded. 'I suppose so.' 'What he did with his money's just finding out.' Then she looked at the young man thoughtfully. 'I've had a long talk with that lawyer body, Mr. Gillespie, and he approves of what I have done. I've let the house.'

Sir George stared.

"Subject to your approval, of course, for it's yours, but I wasn't going to let a chance like this slip by. Some American folk that had more money than I could count in a month of Sab baths. They wanted Sanderson and wanted it that bad that they came up to my price. They are highly recommended. I could pay the servants off with the first month's rent, and get them jobs with the new folk, and the rent for the rest of the season put in bank would settle up the debts, if you agree."

"It sounds quite reasonable," said Sir George, and there was silence again as the maid took the fish plates and brought in the meat course.

It was roast beef with potatoes and cabbage but it was the food of the gods to hungry Sir George, who fell upon it.

Lady Sanderson, not having his appetite, ate a little more slowly and between bites studied her stepson.

"Seven and six is all you have?"

Sir George, his mouth full, nodded.

"Where'll you sleep?" asked the practical Aggy.

"I haven't decided yet," Sir George looked at her with a smile. "But at that I'm not 'daunted' as you used to say, Aggy. I'll walk to Hamilton's club and ask."

"He's off and away," interrupted Lady Sanderson. "His mother told me that, as for the telephone this very day. He was out at Mont Denys for the week-end. I don't see how him there when she told you were coming back."

Sir George looked somewhat discomposed.

"What did you say?"

"I don't know," Lady Sanderson said. "She called me. It was a little while ago. I was here and you were expected, and she telephoned me and asked when you were coming."

"She has heard of the collapse of the oil business, I suppose?"

"I expect. She seemed to know everything but the date of your arrival, and I told her that myself and said that if Lord Archibald wanted to see you he'd just have to wait, as you had things concerning the estate to settle before you were off to America."

Sir George leaned back in his chair and surveyed this extraordinary woman.

"America? Why on earth should I go to America? Where did you get that idea?"

"It popped into my head," said Aggy. "Lady Hamilton was so fearfully condescending like, and so feared that you would look up Lord Archibald for a loan, that I just minded myself that the Sandersons were one of the oldest baronetcies in the kingdom and the Hamiltons had been two hundred years! So I wasn't letting her try to patronize Sir Steele's widow or his son. I told her exactly what popped into my head. Glad am I that I did, for it kept her round and round there till it turned into as good a plan as any I could think of. So if you can nothing pressing to do the night Sir George."

He looked at her and smiled. "You go too fast for me, Aggy. I have to look for a place to sleep."

"Then that's settled," Lady Sanderson declared, but the look she gave him implied him not to refuse her, "as you'll remember that I'm your stepmother and take a shakedown here at my flat. You're that tall and I'm such a shorty that I think you'll have to take the bedroom, and I'll take the sitting room couch."

To refuse, with those blue eyes, generally so hard, fixed anxiously on him was beyond Sir George. He tried to. He protested, but finally found himself saying: "I'll accept your hospitality gladly, Lady Sanderson."

"Aggy," but I'm to have the couch."

Lady Sanderson for the first time that evening actually smiled. "I doubt it," she said. "I doubt you can doubt my that small, but we'll leave that until the time comes. At present, while the lass is clearing, we'll have the coffee and cigarettes in the sitting room, and I'll tell you this American plan."

"Yes," agreed Sir George, but he set his handsome jaw. Aggy was quite all right and a splendid manager. She had always been that, but she was not going to manage him into going to America.

"Aggy" saw the set jaw and began calmly: "You'll have mind when you were a wee bit laddie, I was used to tell you stories of my brother, Robert, in America?"

Sir George, absorbed in lighting his cigarette, nodded.

"He's still there, and he's a big man in his way."

"What is his way?"

"Some kind of contracting business. Putting up weirs and grand public buildings, bridges and they awful skyscrapers that crowd streets over there."

Sir George nodded to signify his comprehension.

"He's by way of being something awful well off."

Sir George's eyes opened.
